THE END

NOTE.

On page 10 against the marginal note "Succession Duty" it is stated that, "as the freehold works are bequeathed without any directions for sale, these pass at once without any act on the part of the Executors." This is not now correct, as since the death of my Testator and the consequent succession of his nephew, the Land Transfer Act of 1897 has been passed, under which the estate in real property vests in the Executor or Administrator, and if it has been specifically devised the assent of the Executor to the devise is necessary to complete it. In the meanwhile the Executor is Trustee for the Devisee. If any rents are received while the property is in the Trustee's possession it will be necessary to open Accounts with the Property, and with the Devisee, but if the assent is given immediately it will be sufficient to make a note upon the "Principal" Account of the nature of the Property, the name of the Devisee, and the date when assent was given by the Executor.

EXECUTORSHIP ACCOUNTS.

THIS little book is founded upon an address delivered to the Chartered Accountants Students' Society of London in the year 1889, which was subsequently published, and has gone through two editions.

The changes in the forms for obtaining a Grant of Probate and for payment of the death duties, which have been introduced since the passing of the Finance Acts in 1894 and 1896 have rendered some portions of the original book obsolete, and slight alterations have been necessary to make the pro formâ Account of the Executors' dealings with the estate administered by them consistent with these forms. It is hoped that the amended account, with the accompanying explanations, may continue to serve as an useful working model for Accountant Students' and others interested in this branch of an Accountant's Work.

The form of Account which it is desirable for an Executor to adopt is equally applicable to the office of an Administrator, but for the present purpose it is better to draw the illustration from an Executor, who has definite instructions for dealing with the estate, than from an Administrator, who administers the estate according to law.

It is, therefore, assumed that the Testator, whose estate is the subject of administration, has left a will, of which the purport is given in the following abstract, which should be written for facility of reference on the face of the Draft Account.

Abstract of the WILL of ARTHUR BRADSHAW, Esq., late of the Atlas Works, Bermondsey, and of No. 1,001 Hampstead Road, London, N., Mechanical Engineer.

Will dated 14th October 1890.

Testator appoints Executors and Trustees—

His brother, JAMES BRADSHAW.

CHARLES DRURY, of Great George Street, Westminster, Consulting Engineer.

Bequeaths to ARTHUR JAMES BRADSHAW, son of brother JAMES BRADSHAW—

- (a) Goodwill of business at Atlas Works.
- (b) £10,000 part of capital employed therein.
- (c) Freeholds, Atlas Works, Bermondsey.

Bequeaths to Wife, MARY BRADSHAW—

- (a) Jewels, trinkets, wines and consumable stores.
- (b) £500 within one month of death.
- (c) All household furniture, and freehold dwelling-house, No. 1,001 Hampstead Road, for life or widowhood.

Gives to executors all real estate and personal estate upon trust to convert, and out of proceeds to pay—

- (a) Before mentioned legacy of £500 to wife.
- (b) Legacy of £100 to each executor who shall prove the will.
- (c) Legacy of £500, free of duty, to the Trustees of St. Thomas's Hospital.

And to set apart :—

- (d) £10,000 to be invested upon same securities as residue, and the income thereof accumulated, until EMILY, daughter of brother James, attains 21 or marries, and thereafter income of £10,000, and of all accumulations arising therefrom, to be paid to her for life, for her sole and separate use ; and after her death the legacy and income thereof to be applied in the same manner in all respects as her share of residue.

And to invest residue upon Government securities, Mortgage of freeholds and leaseholds, with not less than 60 years to run, or upon debenture, preference, or guaranteed stock of any railway company paying a dividend upon its ordinary stock, or upon municipal securities.

Income of residue to be applied in payment to widow of £1,200 per annum for her life, and balance to be divided into two equal shares, one payable to ARTHUR JAMES BRADSHAW, and so much as is required of the remaining share to be applied to the maintenance and education of EMILY BRADSHAW until she attains 21 or marries, and, thereafter, the income to be paid to her for her sole and separate use.

If EMILY BRADSHAW's share of residuary income is insufficient for her maintenance and education the executors may resort to the income arising from the legacy of £10,000.

Upon death of wife, one half share of residue shall be paid to ARTHUR JAMES absolutely, and one half share retained in trust for EMILY, so much of the income as may be required to be applied to her maintenance, and any surplus to accumulate, until she attains 21 or marries, and thereafter to pay income to her for life, and after her death in trust for all her children, if any, in equal shares, who being sons, shall attain 21, or being daughters, attain 21 or marry, with power to apply income of their presumptive shares for maintenance and education. Accruer of shares of any children who who may die under 21 and unmarried. If no children of EMILY BRADSHAW, this share to ARTHUR JAMES BRADSHAW absolutely.

The Executors may, in their absolute discretion, allow all or any part of the capital employed in the testator's business to remain for such time and at such interest as they think fit, upon ARTHUR JAMES giving a bond for repayment.

Testator died 4th August 1894.

Will proved in the Principal Registry, 14th August 1894, by JAMES BRADSHAW and CHARLES DRURY.

Estate sworn under £96,000.

It may not infrequently be desirable to obtain the advice of a solicitor to interpret some clauses in a will, but usually an accountant's knowledge is sufficient to enable him to reduce the contents so far as they affect the accounts to a few short and intelligible sentences.

It has been thought undesirable to encumber the account with any number of testamentary intricacies, as a simple statement will serve equally well to illustrate the mode of keeping Executorship Accounts.

The Journal is not usually employed in Trust Accounts, as it is an advantage to have full details upon the face of each Ledger Account, and unless the entries are very numerous, it is better to make the whole in one book, which thus becomes Journal, Cash Book, and Ledger in one. If the accounts are voluminous they may be divided into parts such as "Cash Book," "Private Ledger," and "Rent and Investment Ledger." Where a Journal is used there is a tendency to exclude information from the Ledger Accounts, and the necessity for constant reference hampers an accountant when he requires to extract information, while it reduces what should be perfect simplicity to hopeless confusion when the accounts are submitted to an executor or legatee.

Where the accounts are all entered in one book, it is convenient to adopt the following order which is arranged upon something like a principle. Arrangement of Accounts.

First in order is an account of the Principal of the Estate, having in immediate succession the Subsidiary Accounts, such as "Funeral Expenses," "Testamentary Expenses," "Executorship Expenses," "Debts," and "Legacies," and where the estate comprises many investments a classification of them may be made for entry on the credit side of the account under their respective Subsidiary Accounts, and in the order of the Residuary Account; but it is better, as a rule, to avoid subdivision of the credits, and to make the one account a complete and continuous record of the realisation of the estate. Principal and its Subsidiary Accounts.

Next follows "Income," and then the "Cash Account," after which come the Personal Accounts, grouped as follows: Income, Cash, and Personal.

- 1.—Bankers.
- 2.—Testator's trade, shares, properties, loan and mortgages.
- 3.—Annuitants.
- 4.—Legatees.

In the pro formâ statement, which is appended to show the working of a set of Executorship Accounts, the entries have been restricted as far as possible to one of each kind, and with this view, in some instances, round figures have been used to complete the account where exact figures have previously been used by way of illustration.

Intention to show Duties.

Returning now to the abstract of the will, it will be seen that the testator, having no children, bequeaths the bulk of his property, subject to an annuity in favour of his widow, to a nephew and niece. The intention in having a childless testator was to admit an illustration of the payment of legacy duty, which does not arise if the bequests are to children, now that the one per cent. duty is abolished.

The next step is to see what the executors have to do, and learn from their accounts how they carry out the testator's directions.

Succession Duty.

Firstly, as the freehold works are bequeathed to the nephew without any directions for sale, these pass at once without any act upon the part of the executors; but, as the successor is liable to pay duty, he may probably ask the accountant to prepare the necessary form, which will be found numbered 6 in the schedule.

The affidavit for probate is prepared by the solicitor, but as the accountant is often asked to furnish particulars of the estate and of the testator's debts, it is desirable to include this form properly filled up in the schedule. (See Form A.)

Estate Duty.

It has been necessary to provide a sum of £5,587 for estate duty and fees, and, as the executors have been satisfied that a large estate must come into their hands, they have obtained, on their own responsibility, an advance of the requisite amount from the testator's bankers; but, as the set of accounts will clearly and fully narrate the history of the administration, it will be the best course to turn to it and let it speak for itself.

History of Administration shown by Statement of Accounts.

The executors have to account for the estate of the testator come to their hands, or to the hands of any other persons by their order, or for their use, and to show that they have dealt with the whole in due course of administration.

Commencing with the Account of Principal in the set of accounts, it will appear that the testator died on the 4th August 1894, and that he left a small sum in the house and a balance at his bankers; that he had a considerable capital in his trade, the whole of which was left by the executors in the hands of the nephew to whom the goodwill was bequeathed after obtaining valuations from properly qualified persons. The executors appear to have been justified in this course, as the amount to which he would be entitled for his legacy and share of residue would probably amount to the value left in his hands, and it was evidently the intention of the testator that he should enjoy the trade without interruption. It further appears that the goodwill of the trade, for the purpose of paying duties, was valued at £4,000, that he also possessed some railway stock and some leasehold property, and had lent £1,000 upon note of hand to a friend, and £6,000 upon mortgage.

Particulars of Estate as shown by Accounts.

In this way there is at once a record of all the property of ascertained amount, and of property which was productive at the testator's death. The cash in hand and at the bankers pass to the executors as soon as the will is proved; the capital in the trade is ascertained as quickly as possible, and brought into account; the railway stock and leasehold property are brought under notice by the proportion of the dividend and rent accrued to the death, and the loans and mortgages being ascertained amounts are at once brought into the accounts.

The properties which are not of ascertained value, and which are unproductive, do not immediately appear; but to avoid any chance of their being overlooked, an account is opened under heading which becomes a standing memorandum pending realisation.

The Principal Account will always give the property ascertained or converted, while a survey of the other accounts will give the property not converted.

The original intention was that the Principal Account should only contain property realised, and to be consistent, loans and mortgages should be excluded until they have been got in; but it will be found in practice that it saves trouble to bring them in at once, and, should there be any loss, to write that off to the debit of Principal.

Proceeding with the history of the administration, the account tells you that the executors sold the horses and carriage, and got in a life policy (an asset whose existence an accountant will always expect), and that the leasehold property was sold in June 1895. A reference to the Loan Account will tell you that it was repaid in July 1895, and a reference to the Mortgage Account will show that this was allowed to remain as an investment of the trust estate.

The will has already told you that the testator was the owner of the house in which he lived, and that he had given the use of this house and of his furniture to his wife, for her life or widowhood. You will find from this account that the wife died in January 1898, and that, shortly after her death, the house and furniture were sold and the estate divided, and that the executors retained the railway stock held by the testator as an investment of the niece's share, for which purpose it was valued at the medium price of the day.

Payments out of Principal.

The debit side of the Principal Account gives you the various classes of payments in the order of their priority, and full details of these will be found in the Subsidiary Accounts.

Under "Debts," only simple contract debts are entered, but care must always be taken, if there are other classes of debts, to enter them in the order of their priority. Care should also be taken to ascertain if rates, unpaid at the death or made afterwards, are prospective or retrospective, and to apportion them correctly between debts and payments out of income.

In the "Legacies" Account some items are posted from the Personal Accounts and one from the Cash Account. The object is to facilitate reference to the will, when it is wished to ascertain if all legacies have been discharged, by showing the amount of each legacy in one sum free from any complication of duty paid in respect thereof. The precise mode in which the legacies have been discharged will be seen on reference to the Personal Accounts.

The Income Account also tells its story (which commences from the death) and shows what income was produced by the estate, and from what source income was derived and how it was applied. In this account it is desirable to give full particulars to avoid reference to the separate accounts of the properties. Income Account.

The Cash Account and Bank Account have no special features. In the Cash Account, where the posting is to a Nominal Account, the name of the payer or payee, and the consideration should be given. Cash Account.

The account of the London and North Western Railway Stock has been condensed, but it will be seen that if it were made out in full, it would show that all dividends had been regularly received. Stocks.

Attention is called to the mode of apportionment of dividends or interest payable half-yearly, the proportion being based upon the number of days in the particular half-yearly period in which the dividend or interest arises, and not upon the number of days in a whole year. This will make a substantial difference when large sums have to be apportioned. For instance, from 1st January to 30th June comprises 181 days, whilst from 1st July to 31st December comprises 184 days, and the half-year Apportionment of half-yearly dividends.

from Lady-day to Michaelmas comprises 188 days, while between Michaelmas and Lady-day there are only 177 days.

Leaseholds. The accounts of the leasehold property give particulars of the income arising therefrom, and of the ultimate realisation.

Freeholds. The account with the freehold house, which at first is opened only as a memorandum, shows the settlement with the purchaser; certain proportions of the taxes to the date of completion being charged off to the life-tenant, and to income respectively.

Household Furniture. The account of the household furniture is at first opened merely as a memorandum, but upon the death of the widow the realisation is here recorded.

Loan. Henry Owen's account shows the half-yearly payments of interest, and the date of repayment of the loan.

Mortgage. John Edward's account shows the half-yearly payments of interest, and the apportionment of interest to the date of division of the estate, when the principal sum and the interest accrued are carried forward as an investment for the niece's share.

Stock purchased by Executors. The account following shows that on the 4th August 1895 the executors purchased Great Western Railway Debenture Stock to the value of £14,200, and that on the date of division of the estate the value had increased by £1,000, which has been carried to the credit of principal.

Legacies absolute. The next account shows the payment of the legacy to the widow, which is made a matter of account, and then follows the annuity to the widow, which is followed by the Legacy Accounts of the executors, and the Purchase Account of the nephew, and the Residuary Legatees' Accounts of income.

Purchase of Trade Account. From the account with Arthur James Bradshaw, Purchase of Trade Account, it will appear that acting upon the discretionary power given them by the will, the executors allowed the nephew to retain the capital in the business, after giving him credit for his legacy of £10,000, upon condition that he should pay the balance by seven yearly instalments, and should pay interest meanwhile at 5 per cent. per annum. This account further shows that the instalments and interest were regularly paid until the death of the widow, when the whole balance was discharged out of the nephew's share of residue. A note is made on this account, that vouchers for payment of the testator's liabilities were produced to the Executors' Accountants.

An account of money paid for maintenance of the niece is opened, and the total transferred to her Income Account upon her attaining 21, when the balance of her share of income is transferred to the account showing her share of principal, as under the will these accumulations form part of the trust funds for her benefit.

In compliance with the directions contained in the will, a sum of £10,000 was set apart for the testator's niece, but it was never separately invested; the executors satisfying themselves with allowing interest at 4 per cent. on the amount. This interest was added to the principal of the legacy, and the whole transferred to the account with her share of residue, when she attained 21, as there was no longer any reason for keeping the funds apart. No interest has been allowed on this sum of £10,000, until the expiration of twelve months from the death, as the bequest was not to a child of the testator.

The next account shows the legacy duty paid upon residue and its distribution, and particulars of this Residuary Account have been filled in upon Form No. 3.

Each residuary legatee received a legacy of £10,000, but under the circumstances attending this administration it has not been thought necessary to deal with the duty on these sums apart from the general residue.

Shares of Residue.

Arthur James Bradshaw's share of residue is discharged by the balance due from him for purchase of the testator's trade, and by a payment in cash, and Emily Bradshaw's share together with her legacy and accumulations of income is carried forward as a trust fund to be invested for her benefit.

Income of
after attaining 21.

The income arising from the investments of this trust fund will be paid over as received to the life tenant, and after her death may have to be applied for the maintenance and education of her children, with whom again separate accounts must be kept until they are respectively entitled to receive their shares.

Summary of Executors' dealings as shown by Accounts.

The executors have thus, as appears from their accounts, fulfilled all the directions of the will, down to the point of retaining the niece's share, as trustees, for herself and her children, or other successors. They have transferred the goodwill of the business to the nephew as well as his specific legacy of £10,000. They have given to the widow the jewels and household stores, and her legacy and annuity. They have after her death sold the furniture and house left for her occupation. They have paid all other legacies and can at any moment produce a clear account of their dealings with the estate.

Balance Sheet.

The Balance Sheet now stands as follows:—

To Emily Bradshaw's share of Residue and Legacy	36,952	14	0	By Lloyd's Bank, Lim.	8,036	14	0
				„ London and North Western Railway Co., value of stock	7,600	0	0
				„ John Edwards, Principal due upon Mortgage ..	6,000	0	0
				„ Do. Interest to date	116	0	0
				„ Great Western Rail- way Co., value of stock	15,200	0	0
	£36,952	14	0		£36,952	14	0

The accumulations of income until the niece attained 21 were directed to be added to her share of residue, so that, so far as she is concerned, the trustees have a fresh starting point from that date; but the investments which they retain to answer her share carry a certain amount of accrued dividend or interest, which is included in the price of the day.

Interest included in investments retained to answer niece's share.

It will accordingly be necessary in dealing with the income produced by these securities to pay over to the niece as income, only the balance of dividends and interest from the date of her attaining 21, to the end of the half-year, during which the dividend or interest arises. The other portions must be retained by the trustees and will be a sum for which they must find an investment. It is usual to invest as close up as possible in securities paying a fair rate of interest, and to invest the exact balance for the time being in Consols.

In the Trustee's Accounts it will be necessary to debit each investment in the income column with the balance of the half-year's dividend only, and when the cash is paid for the dividend to post the proportion accrued to the date of the niece attaining 21 in the principal column, thereby reducing the cost of the investment. For example, the further debit to the London and North Western Railway Co., at 30th June 1898 will be :

"To Emily Bradshaw, Income Account, balance of half-year's dividend, 91 days at 4 per cent, less income tax, £1 13s. 4d., £48 6s. 8d."

When the half-year's dividend, £96 13s. 4d., is received, £48 6s. 8d., only will be paid to the tenant for life and £48 6s. 8d. will remain in the trustee's hands for reinvestment as part of the principal of the Trust Fund, and the interest on the mortgage and the Great Western Railway debentures will be dealt with in like manner. Young ladies who are entirely dependent upon their income from such a trust fund are often subjected to some inconvenience at the outset, as they have no funds immediately payable to them, and only a portion of a half-year's income payable to them when the first half-year's dividends are received. The problem of how to live while the corn is growing usually has to be solved by a payment on account of income by the executor.

From this time this account will be during the niece's life a simple record of the receipt and payment of income, subject only to any changes of investment.

Upon death of niece.

Upon her death accounts will have to be kept of the children's shares during infancy, or if they are all of age the fund must be got in and divided. If any reversioner has mortgaged his share and notice thereof has been given to the executor, it is a good plan to make a note of this upon the accounts.

The account, as already stated, is intended as an illustration only, and not as an exact statement, and there are details in which the working is not strictly accurate, but it will, doubtless, answer the purpose for which it is designed.

The form of account has many uses and advantages.

Advantages of this form of Executors'
Accounts.

Firstly.—It is a clear and continuous record of the executors' and trustees' dealings with the estate from the death, and the fact of such an account being kept ensures care in the administration, and is a safeguard against breaches of trust. In addition, the account is always an answer to those troublesome people who are born or married into families, and commence a disturbance because they do not find so much money as they expected, or because the trustee has offended them (very frequently by declining to commit a breach of trust).

Secondly.—The accounts are so arranged that with very little trouble the Stamp Duty Accounts can be made out from them, the order and classification of the items in the two accounts being nearly identical.

Thirdly.—If any application to the Court of Chancery be necessary in the course of the administration, the Court will often be satisfied with the production of these accounts, while, if a detailed Cash Account be required in the Chancery form, it is readily made up from the statement, and all the usual interrogatories may be readily answered.

Fourthly.—It enables the trustees to furnish the materials for a complete release, and further to bind the beneficiaries by obtaining their signatures to the detailed accounts.

Fifthly.—It ensures the receipt of all income, and its proper distribution among the persons entitled to it, and guards against any waste of principal through inadvertence.

Sixthly.—If the accounts are commenced as soon as the executors have proved the will, they ensure all these advantages at a small cost to the estate.

These advantages offer a great inducement to trustees to relieve themselves of labour and responsibility by employing an accountant. They may by doing so have a trustworthy agent who will keep the accounts, send half-yearly or other periodical statements to the beneficiaries, take proper receipts, and, in fact, manage all the current business of the trust at a cost to which no legatee can take exception.

It must not be assumed that Executorship Accounts are always capable of being dealt with as easily and clearly as those which have been put before you. Carelessness and disorder are vices to which both testators and executors are subject, and frequently an accountant is employed because no one without his special training, and the patience which it

Complicated Accounts to be unravelling.

engenders, could bring order out of the seeming chaos resulting from want of system in recording transactions as they arise. There is no case to which the telegraphic motto of our Institute "Unravel," applies with so great force as when we are dealing with a mass of papers accumulated by a man who is no longer living to furnish a clue to their meaning.

Assistance to Executor.

Apart from the accounts an accountant can often render valuable aid to an executor by his training in administrative work. There are often trades to be carried on, financial arrangements to be made, and many things to be done at the moment with a knowledge and promptitude which arises from practice as liquidators and trustees. But the present subject deals only with Executorship Accounts, and a few general hints as to the mode of dealing with a testator's papers when they are first received, will usefully conclude these remarks. It may be assumed that all men, no matter how unmethodical they may appear, have a system of dealing with papers and documents; it may be a very bad and imperfect system, but it is there, and the accountant's first care must be to find it out, as, once found, it will materially assist him in understanding the testator's affairs. Sometimes it may not appear until weeks have been spent upon the papers, but there is little doubt that the system is there.

Advantage of finding idiosyncrasy.

Short direction as to arrangement of papers.

Firstly, it is desirable to run quickly through the papers, discarding all which are manifestly irrelevant, then to classify the remainder, and, as far as possible, arrange them in order of date, then to proceed to reduce the information which they contain to notes, and it will be found that by patient comparison, an unfailing memory, and that trick which accountants acquire of recalling a figure which they saw an hour or a week before, it is possible eventually to construct a coherent account. Practice and the habit of concentration will enable the accountant to recall two or three amounts scattered over various papers, and mentally adapt them to balance the sum of them which has appeared elsewhere.

One word of advice is desirable in conclusion—never to put hasty work into Executors' Accounts. There are so many points to be determined as to the proper destination of each figure, and there are so many subtleties which may be easily overlooked that in this, as in so many cases, the safest motto is "Festina lente."

The gross value thereof, as at the date of the deceased's death, was altogether £93,952 7s. 9d., and (7) the whole (7) thereof, amounting in value to £93,952 7s. 9d., was then situate in England.

4. The first part of Schedule No. 1, hereto annexed, contains a true and particular list of the debts (8) due and owing from the deceased at the time of his death to persons resident within the United Kingdom, or due to persons resident out of the United Kingdom, but contracted to be paid in the United Kingdom, or charged on property situate in the United Kingdom, with the names and addresses of the several persons to whom the same are respectively due, and the descriptions and amounts of such debts. Total duty and Interest (Personal and Real Property) paid on this Affidavit

* For the purpose of computing the duty, the following adjustments should be made. See para. 72 of the Form A—2:—
Where the deceased died on or after the 1st July 1896.—The net value of the property should be decreased to an even multiple of £100 [see Finance Act 1896, sec. 17], except that where the net value exceeds £100 and does not exceed £200, the Estate Duty is £1. Thus, £1,422 should be treated as £1,400. Where duty is paid in respect of real property as well as personal property, and there is an odd fraction of £100 in the respective capitals, and the two fractions together do not amount to £100, each fraction is to be disregarded. Thus, Personal £1,422 and Real £920, should be treated as Personal £1,400 and Real £900. Where, however, the two fractions together amount to or exceed £100, whichever of the two classes of property has the larger fraction of £100 should be raised to the next multiple of £100, whilst in the other class of property the fraction should be disregarded. Thus, Personal £1,482 and Real £920 should be treated as Personal £1,500 and Real £900; whilst Personal £1,427 and Real £962 should be treated as Personal £1,400 and Real £1,000.

Where the deceased died before the 1st July 1896.—The net value of the property should be increased to an even multiple of £10 [see Finance Act 1894, sec. 17]. Thus, £1,422 should be treated as £1,430. Where duty is paid in respect of real property as well as personal property, and there is an odd fraction of £10 in the respective capitals, and the two fractions together exceed £10, each class of property should be increased to the next multiple of £10. Thus, Personal £1,482 and Real £920 should be treated as Personal £1,490 and Real £930, and Personal £1,489 and Real £922 should also be treated as Personal £1,490 and Real £930. Where, however, the two fractions together do not exceed £10, whichever of the two classes of property has the larger fraction of £10 should be increased to the next multiple of £10, whilst in the other class of property the fraction should be disregarded. Thus, Personal £1,482 and Real £926 should be treated as Personal £1,480 and Real £930; whilst Personal £1,486 and Real £922 should be treated as Personal £1,490 and Real £920. The values, so adjusted, should be written in the spaces provided (XXIII.) below the true values (XX. or XXII.), and the duty and interest should be computed upon the adjusted values and not upon the true values.

Real property directed to be sold at or after the deceased's death, whether actually sold or not, is to be treated as real property.

 If the property, the subject of the Interest in Expectancy, which forms an "estate by itself," is chargeable at the same or a higher rate of Estate Duty than the aggregated "one estate," deduct here the whole value of the Interest in Expectancy. But if the "estate by itself" is chargeable at a lower rate, then deduct only so much of the value of the interest as represents that lower rate. Thus, if the "estate by itself" is chargeable at 2 per cent., and the aggregated "one estate" at 3 per cent., deduct two-thirds, and if the rates are 3 per cent. and 7 per cent. respectively, deduct three-sevenths, and so on. If payment of the duty which still remains to be paid is elected to be deferred until the interest falls into possession, then deduct the remaining part of the value (in the above examples, one-third and four-sevenths respectively) at No. XIX.

§ The Estate Duty on the Annuities may be paid by instalments (see para. 63 of Form A—2). Deduct the whole value of the Annuities here, whether the duty is or is not to be paid by instalments, and fill in a Form C—3 (in duplicate) adapting it as necessary. Annex the forms to the Affidavit, and instructions for the payment of the whole duty, or the instalment or instalments due, as may be desired, will be issued after the grant of representation has issued. No interest is chargeable for the first year after the death.

§ If at the time of the delivery of this Affidavit not more than 12 months have expired since the date of the deceased's death, carry out the whole duty or $\frac{1}{10}$ th of it, according as the duty is to be paid in one sum, or by yearly or by half-yearly instalments. No interest is chargeable.

§§ Where at the time of the delivery of this Affidavit more than 12 months have expired since the date of the deceased's death, the duty on the real property, whether it is to be paid in one sum or by instalments, is chargeable with interest. The interest is chargeable upon the whole unpaid duty, from 12 months after the deceased's death up to the date of payment of the duty or of an instalment thereof, although part only of the duty may be overdue. See sect. 6(8) of the Finance Act 1894, and para. 62 of the Form A—2. Where the duty is elected to be paid by instalments, and payment is not made on a date when an instalment becomes payable, the interest upon the whole duty is to be calculated up to the date when the last overdue instalment was payable, and interest from that date is to be calculated upon the overdue instalments.

To be signed by the persons } JAMES BRADSHAW.
 making the Affidavit .. } CHARLES DRURY.

Observe.—If there is any property other than that in the Accounts Nos. 1, 2, 3 (a), 3 (b), 4 and 5, in respect of which Estate Duty is payable on the deceased's death, it should, to the best of the executor's knowledge and belief, be specified in appropriate accounts annexed to this Affidavit. See Finance Act 1894, s. 8 (3), and paras. 1 to 32 of the Form A—2. The Accounts, No. 4 (Personal) and No. 5 (Real), printed on page 5 of this Affidavit, show the shape which the accounts should take. The names and addresses of trustees and of donees and other beneficiaries should in all cases be stated.

Form No. 17. To be presented with Affidavit (Form A—1 or A—3) on payment of Duty.

[For Rates of Duty see p. 4 of Instructions on Form A—2, accompanying Form of Affidavit A—1 or A—3.]

The Accountants' Manual

A most valuable fund of information concerning various points of Practice and Law Relating to the Profession is that contained in the Questions and Answers of the Institute Examinations.

The above Volumes comprise the back numbers of the Questions and Answers with copious and carefully-prepared Indices. By this means an extremely valuable mass of information, which for some time had only been available to the Student for Examination purposes, is thrown open to practitioners; and the series—comprising a complete professional code that will be in daily request—should find a place on the shelf of every member of the Profession.

Throughout the Series, the Answers have been written with the utmost care, and the views of specialists have been obtained in all cases where there has been the slightest doubt as to the correct practice. In the preparation of the Indices, the greatest pains have been taken to frame them in accordance with the requirements of Chartered Accountants, and all points of law that have been rendered obsolete by recent legislation have not been indexed.

The Series forms one of the most valuable Contributions to the literature of the Profession.

The first Volume comprises the Examination Questions and Answers from December 1884 to June 1887 (both inclusive); the second Volume includes those from December 1887 to June 1890; the third Volume comprises the Questions and Answers from December 1890 to June 1892; the fourth Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1892 to June 1894; the fifth Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1894 to June 1896; the sixth Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1896 to June 1898; the seventh Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1898 to June 1900; the eighth Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1900 to June 1902; and the ninth Volume, the Questions and Answers from December 1902 to June 1904 (both inclusive). The Questions and Answers published after that date will form the succeeding Volumes, which it is proposed to issue every other year.

To those who have subscribed for these Questions and Answers as and when issued, the Indices will be supplied separately, price 2/6 each, and will thus be obtainable for binding up with Subscribers' own sets. To Annual Subscribers, however, the Index is supplied free of further charge.

Recommended in the Official Syllabus for the C.P.A. Examinations (New York).
